Inside the Soup Kitchen

Report by Jose Betancourt Interview by Ishon Johnson

On November 14, 2014 students from West Brooklyn Community High School went on a trip to the soup kitchen. The soup kitchen was located in Park Slope. The kids that were able to go were from Tiffany’s economics class. The students that attended were Santiago C, Rosanna C., and Christina R.

Tiffany said that “it was a good experience “and that she would do again because “it felt good to give back”. She also said that it made her more appreciative of the things she has in her life and that “people will always complain about the littlest things in life.” Tiffany said that the majority of the people were thankful and some were embarrassed that they were there but it was an overall good experience.

“The idea of giving back and having students contribute to community services is something important because it helps students learn to have responsibilities and help those who are less fortunate in society.”
